To the Hiring Manager,

I am applying for the Release Assistance Officer position at the Jackson County Circuit Court. I am a Medford resident with over 15 years of experience in structured information gathering, documentation, case management support, and communicating complex decisions to the public under pressure. I am drawn to this role because of its direct impact on community safety and access to justice, and I believe my combination of professional experience and transferable skills positions me to serve this court and this community effectively.

Experience Conducting Interviews to Obtain Personal or Financial Information

Throughout my career in technical support and customer service—spanning Cox Communications, AT&T, Clearwire, and Dell—I routinely conducted structured interviews to gather personal, account, and financial information from customers. These interactions required targeted questioning, active listening, accurate documentation, and verification against system records. At Dell Tier 2 support, I conducted remote diagnostic interviews to assess technical situations before recommending resolution paths. At Cox and AT&T, I gathered account and billing information under strict procedural guidelines. This disciplined, information-first approach to interviewing maps directly to the structured pre-arraignment screening this role requires.

Experience Communicating Calmly and Effectively in Emotionally Charged Situations

Call center work is fundamentally about maintaining professional calm when people are frustrated, confused, or in distress. Across multiple contracts—internet outages, billing disputes, hardware failures, service denials—I developed consistent ability to de-escalate tense interactions, communicate clearly and empathetically, and maintain accurate records throughout. In written communications, I produced escalation summaries, case notes, and documentation requiring precision under time pressure. Engaging with defendants and their families in pretrial circumstances demands exactly this combination of composure, clarity, and care.

Experience Communicating Decisions About Approval or Denial of Services and Explaining Regulations

In roles supporting Cox, AT&T, Clearwire, and Dell, I regularly communicated policy-based decisions to customers: explaining why a service request was approved or denied, what eligibility requirements applied, and what options remained available. I learned to deliver these decisions clearly and without ambiguity while maintaining empathy for individuals disappointed or frustrated by the outcome. This experience aligns directly with communicating release eligibility determinations and explaining the legal basis of recommendations to judges, attorneys, and the public.

Experience Using a Computer to Access and Input Information

I have 15+ years of professional experience using computers as my primary work tool, including Active Directory, AS/400 systems, ticketing platforms, remote desktop tools, and multiple case management and documentation systems. As a USPS Data Conversion Operator, I met federal production and accuracy standards for high-volume data input. I am proficient in Microsoft Office, Google Workspace, and LibreOffice, and I have consistently been the person in the room brought in to learn new systems quickly. I am fully prepared to learn OJD's internal law enforcement, jail, and court case management systems and to obtain LEDS certification within the six-month window.

Experience in a Court, Criminal Justice, or Legal Environment

While I have not worked directly in a court or corrections setting, I have worked in environments that demanded strict procedural compliance, confidentiality, and conduct accountability. As a Network Administrator on a DoD contract in Afghanistan (ITT Systems, 2009–2010), I operated within a military chain of command alongside law enforcement and security personnel, maintained classified network infrastructure with zero tolerance for deviation, and processed security clearance requirements for that deployment. I carry that orientation toward procedural integrity and confidentiality into every role. I understand this is my least direct qualification, and I am committed to earning LEDS certification promptly and learning the court environment with the same dedication I have brought to every new technical and operational environment in my career.

I am available immediately and am a committed local candidate in Medford. I welcome the opportunity to speak with you about how my background can serve the Jackson County Circuit Court and the community it protects.

Respectfully,

Allen Schultz
